Education Commission to Manage National Assessment Project

THE STEERING COMMITTEE of the Education Commission of the States has agreed that the Commission will enter into contractual negotiations which would lead to its acceptance of responsibility for the management and administration of the national assessment project.

The decision followed a two-day steering committee meeting in Arlington, Va., during which testimony was heard from representatives of the major education groups, all of whom endorsed some form of Commission management of the project.

National assessment, for which testing begins this month on a nation-wide basis, aims to determine the educational attainment of students and young adults in an effort to measure the effectiveness of present educational programs.

In the face of rapidly increasing education budgets at all levels of government, governors and legislators stress the need for some way to measure whether or not the states are getting their educational dollars' worth.

Leonard Wood school system's C. W.
Parker Day May 10 will be a recognition banquet. Parker, superintendent there the past 14 years, recently announced this will be his last year at Waynesville-Ft. Wood.

Parker has been a superintendent of schools 44 years: Conway, two; Ozark, 11; Ava, 17; and Waynesville, 14. He has also served as a rural teacher in Texas county, and as high school principal at Licking.

At Waynesville, Parker has seen the school system expand extensively. Eight new schools and five additions have been built. Pupil enrollment has increased by more than 4,000; more than 200 teachers have been added to the faculty. The district's annual budget has increased by more than $3 million during this period.
